The Thirteen 25 Report – September, October 2017 Edition

Amplifying Young Women's Voices to Strengthen Women-Led Community Media Network

“Women’s community radio provides the much needed link for our mothers, daughters and sisters to health, education, transport, weather, gender, policies and services,” said Michelle Tevita-Singh. “It is the information needed for women, by women. I urge you all to see that your role is extremely important.”

Tevita-Singh was speaking at opening of femLINKpacific's Young Women's Community Radio Learning Exchange supported by the Australian Government through the We Rise Coalition that got underway on Monday at the Pacific Community's (SPC) Regional Media Centre in Nabua.

"Broadcasting, particularly radio, is still the most relevant media form," added Sharon Bhagwan Rolls, Executive Producer-Director of femLINKpacific.

Investing in Education – More than about No Fees say Pacific Peace network leaders

“Though it will answer a lot of our problems for early school drop outs before year 10, it is now up to the parents to make sure that 'other costs' are sustained,” stated Anne Pakoa, representative of Vanuatu Young Women’s for Change - a member of the Global Partnership for the Prevention of Armed Conflict (GPPAC) Pacific network.

Women speak out for just wages and workers rights

Something significant happened on the streets of Suva today. Women and men. Young women and children. Stevedores and factory workers. They walked side by side in solidarity with workers from civil society and academia. They sang. They chanted. They walked for social and economic justice.

No Peace Without Women – UNSCR1325+17

It has long been recognised that when women lead and participate in peace processes, peace lasts longer. Peacebuilding is no longer simply about crisis response and post conflict action but, increasingly, about prevention - including through the use of peace education, dialogue and mediation, and transforming political processes to increase the representation of women of all diversities particularly in local governance.

Bringing Peacewomen Together – UNSCR1325+17

“What is special is that we are working together as women within a global civil society network,” says Visaka Dharmadasa of Sri Lanka who has been a member of the Global Partnership for the Prevention of Armed Conflict (GPPAC) since it was established more than 14 years ago.

Celebrating Peace, Reaffirming A Women's Human Security First Approach

“The voices of these women full of emotions... hands scarred and wrinkled with years of hard work still fight for their space in society,” shared Losana Derenalagi, convenor in Nadi and Lautoka for femLINKpacific. “(These are) women who share stories with tears in their eyes. Most of us share our peace as love, joy, happiness and so on. That’s exactly what these women want. Unless we see peace from a conflict prevention lens, their peace is far-fetched.”

No Nukes: Grappling with the Bomb - Britain's Pacific H-bomb tests

'Grappling with the Bomb' is a history of Britain's 1950s program to test the hydrogen bomb, code name Operation Grapple. In 1957–58, nine atmospheric nuclear tests were held at Malden Island and Christmas Island in the British Gilbert and Ellice Islands Colony — today, part of the Pacific nation of Kiribati.

Women's Peace Tables

'Women's Peace Table' is a short film that looks at the role of women in building peace. While examining how women have progress peace and human security throughout periods of conflict, in all their forms, the short film places a spotlight on the need for national and regional inter-governmental spaces to make the decision-making table bigger. The narrative places particular focus on intergenerational dialogue with the film interweaving the reflections of Emanita Vaka'ahi, a young woman living in Tonga, with peacewomen across the Pacific region.
